

This is a black and white aerial photograph of a coastal landscape. The image is oriented vertically. In the upper half, there is a large, dark, irregularly shaped area that appears to be dense vegetation or a forest. This area is surrounded by lighter, sandy or grassy terrain. To the right of the dark area, there is a smaller, more defined area that looks like a field or a small body of water. The coastline is visible on the right side of the image, with waves breaking against the shore. The overall scene suggests a natural, undeveloped coastal environment.
